Follow-up of at risk employees at Giant mine

The attached sheet outlines our proposals for the follow-up of employees at Giant mine.

This has been discussed with the mine manager (now Mr. Moore, Mr. Emery having been elevated to Vice President), who expressed himself as agreeable in principle to all points.

He raised the question of workers who move about within the mill complex and we have suggested that any worker who spends in excess of three months in one of the at risk situations should be included, as well as any employee felt by the mill to merit particular attention.

The problem of former employees remains.

There is no mechanism whereby either the mill or this office can keep track of former employees unless they will undertake to take the initiative in maintaining the liaison.

There is only one possible other route and that is if the Union (Steelworkers or United Mine Workers, which ever eventually takes charge) wishes to accept the responsibility. Presumably an employee in such a trade tends to retain his affiliation with the same union even though he may change his domicile and work place.

Failing that I believe we must be satisfied if every worker is advised on separation that it is his personal responsibility to maintain contact if he is concerned to undergo follow-up after he leaves the Yellowknife mine -
