We have finally cornered Dr. A. J. deVilliers for his comments on the narrative we passed on to him almost 1 year ago. Dr. deVilliers has recently been promoted to a new position in the Department and has left the Environmental Health Directorate.

He stated that while he found the electrocardiograms interesting, in his opinion they had "no health significance". Dr. deVilliers made it quite clear for the first time that he had no intention of even contemplating further action in this matter. Further, there is no person left in the Health Protection Branch who has any knowledge of the study or is willing to persure it further.
